You Can Help Low-Income Adults Keep Their SNAP (Food Stamp) Benefits

SNAP benefits (formerly food stamps) allow low-income people to buy the food they need to stay healthy. Many SNAP recipients ages 18 to 49 are at risk of losing their SNAP benefits due to a SNAP rule that went into effect on January 1, 2016. The rule referred to as Able Bodied Adults Without Dependents (ABAWD) limits SNAP eligibility to three months.

With just a few minutes of your time, you can easily help. Many of those categorized as ABAWDs are not “able-bodied” due to a physical or mental condition that reduces their ability to work.

Frequently Asked Questions

How disabled do my patients need to be to be exempt from the work rule and three-month time limit?

People are exempt from the three-month time limit if they have “a physical or mental impairment that reduces their ability to work 20 hours a week or more.”

Some patients have impairments that prevent them from working at all. Or, some patients have impairments that allow them to work—but they may not be able to work full time, or even 20 hours per week. This standard of unfitness is much less strict than the Social Security standard and does not require a diagnosis or medical records.

Who might qualify for this exemption?

Patients with a reduced ability to work including those who:

- have difficulty maintaining focus and concentration for two hours at a time, including difficulty with consistently remembering and carrying out tasks.
- are diagnosed with “mild” or “moderate” anxiety, depression or maladaptive personality that reduces their ability to work 20 or more hours a week. The symptoms do not need to be “marked” or “severe.”
- have a physical condition that limits them to light or sedentary work, who cannot stand or walk for extended periods of time, or who cannot engage in physical labor on a sustained basis.

How do I verify that my patient has a “reduced ability to work” based on his or her condition?
